Waste Management Report

Nabajyoti College, Kalgachia

Waste Management in Nabajyoti College

Nabajyoti college is dedicated to promoting sustainable practices and waste management is a crucial aspect of our environmental initiatives. With a comprehensive waste management system in place, we strive to minimize our ecological footprints and foster a culture of responsible consumption.

1. Ongoing Good Practices for waste management

1.1 Sanitary Disposal Machine in Girls Common Room

A sanitary disposal machine plays a crucial role in waste management by providing a hygienic solution for the disposal of sanitary products like pads and tampons. These machines are designed to safely collect and dispose of such items, preventing them from clogging up plumbing systems or ending up in landfills where they can contribute to environmental pollution. By offering a discreet and convenient way for individuals to dispose of sanitary products in public restrooms, these machines promote cleanliness and reduce the risk of spreading infections. Moreover, they contribute to overall waste reduction efforts by ensuring proper disposal practices for items that would otherwise be improperly discarded. In essence, sanitary disposal machines are an essential component of comprehensive waste management strategies, promoting both public health and environmental sustainability.

Picture: Inauguration of Sanitary Disposal Machine

1.2 Mushroom Cultivation using Hay waste

Nabajyoti College, Kalgachia has implemented a waste management and utilization practice by cultivating mushrooms on hay waste collected from neighbouring cultivation fields. This approach not only addresses the challenge of agricultural waste disposal but also maximizes the utilization of organic by products. By repurposing hay waste as a substrate for mushroom cultivation, the college transforms what would have been discarded waste into a valuable resource. This initiative demonstrates the college's commitment to sustainability and environmental management, as it can effectively reduce waste while simultaneously creating a useful product. Moreover, the cultivation of mushrooms on hay waste presents a sustainable solution that contributes to the college's efforts in promoting resource efficiency and ecological balance in the region.

1.3 Vermicomposting using water hyacinths generated on the college pond

Vermicomposting is the process of using worms to decompose organic material into nutrient-rich compost. The vermicompost unit in our college has been set up using college wastes. The organic waste i.e. water hyacinths generated on the college pond has been utilized in the Vermicomposting unit. Traditional Vermicomposting steps were followed. It is an eco-friendly way for colleges to manage their organic waste, reduce landfill contributions, and produce nutrient-rich compost for landscaping or campus gardens.

2. Awareness Programme and Cleansing drive

2.1 Cleansing drive by NSS

NSS unit, Nabajyoti college organized a cleansing drive programme from college tiniali to Gunialguri public road on 22/11/2023. The main motto of this drive is to aware the local people about waste management and environmental issues. Further, they set up separate bins for plastic waste and green waste and encourage proper disposal among the local people.

Picture: Cleansing Drive by NSS unit

2.2 Interdepartmental campus cleaning competition

Waste management in college campuses typically involves implementing recycling programs, promoting waste reduction practices, segregating waste properly, educating students and staff about proper disposal methods, and potentially composting organic waste. Students participation in recycling and waste reduction is important. Regular monitoring and evaluation of waste management practices can help identify areas for improvement.

During the FIT INDIA week, Social Service took the initiative to organize an interdepartmental campus cleaning competition. Students from different departments participated and segregated the wastes properly.

2.3 Awareness Programme on Plastic Pollution

Plastic pollution is a growing global concern with far-reaching implications for the environment and human health. Single-use plastics, improper disposal methods, and inadequate recycling practices have led to the accumulation of plastic waste in our oceans, landscapes, and ecosystems. To combat this issue, an awareness programme was initiated to inform and mobilize the students of Nabajyoti College, Kalgachia. The awareness programme on plastic pollution has made significant strides in educating and mobilizing students to address this critical environmental issue. While challenges remain, the outcomes demonstrate the potential for positive change through education and collective action. By continuing to raise awareness and promoting sustainable practices, we can work towards a future with less plastic pollution and a healthier planet for all.
